

Thank you very much.

We'll pick up the tempo with our next song. It was written back in July 1945 by Sammy Cahn and Julie Stein in Los Angeles during one of the hottest days on record. It reached the top of the charts in 1945 and has been recorded by a whole host of artists, including Ella Fitzgerald, Bing Crosby, and Dean Martin. More recently, Jessica Simpson has also made a recording.

Here we go with the song that suggests that even a snowstorm can't change the mood of a person in love. Here's "Let It Snow, Let It Snow, Let It Snow."