

Thank you.

When I was a wee one, I can remember my parents giving me a stern admonition in the months leading up to Christmas. They cautioned me to mind my manners and behave, because if I didn't, Santa Claus probably wouldn't make an appearance at our house that year.

Back in 1934, the song-writing team of Coots and Gillespie put that warning to music, and the song quickly rose to the top of the charts. More recently, the song has been given a new twist by the likes of Bruce Springsteen and Mariah Carey. _____ will sing that version now.

Here we go with our rockin' out version of "Santa Claus Is Coming To Town."
