

Good Afternoon

We're the Mixed Nuts, and we're delighted to welcome you to our Roaring Twenties party. We've put together a whole set of special music of that era for your listening enjoyment.

The Roaring Twenties was a period of economic prosperity, marked by a general feeling of novelty and a break with tradition. Everything seemed possible through modern technology such as automobiles, moving pictures, and radio. Jazz and dancing rose in popularity, and as such the period is often referred to as the Jazz Age. The Wall Street crash of 1929 ended the era.

Today, we'll bring you the music of that era. Our opening selection was written back in 1925 and recorded by Eddie Cantor, Bing Crosby, Frank Sinatra and many others.

Here we go with our version of this great Roaring Twenties hit - "Yes Sir, That's My Baby."
