

Thank you very much. And good afternoon/evening.

We're the Mixed Nuts and we're here to play some of the great songs from the Big Band era. That's the music we grew up dancing to and dating to in years past. We hope that we'll be bringing back many great memories of those times.

Our opening song - "California, Here I Come" - was written for the 1921 Broadway musical "Bombo," starring Al Jolson. It's often called the unofficial state song of California.

Our next selection was written back in 1937 and first recorded by Frances Langford. But the best known recording was by the Sammy Kaye orchestra in 1950. Remember Sammy Kaye? What were we supposed to do with the music of Sammy Kaye? Right! Swing and sway with Sammy Kaye.

Here we go with the beautiful ballad "Harbor Lights."
