

Thank you.

Wow! How time flies. We're almost at the end of our time together.

For our next to last number, we'll play a song that was written way back in 1902 about a guy who worked as a brakeman on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. Apparently, he ditched his lady love, and she sings this song begging him to return.

Here's our version of "Bill Bailey, Won't You Please Come Home."
