

Thank you. Thank you very much.

Here's a song written by Irving Berlin in 1940. After he had written it, he told his secretary that he had probably just written the best song he'd ever written, or for that matter, the best song that anyone had ever written. Irving was not a humble man!

Bing Crosby's version reached the top of the charts in 1942, 1945, and 1946, making it the only song that ruled the charts in three separate years.

Anyone have a guess as to the name of this song? You got it - "White Christmas."

Enjoy!
