

Thank you.

Our next selection was written in 1937 for the Broadway show "Babes In Arms", but it didn't appear in a movie until 1957, when Frank Sinatra sung his version in "Pal Joey." winning the Golden Globe Award for Best Actor - Motion Picture Musical or Comedy in the process. His musical offerings in the movie were enhanced by the fine work of the Nelson Riddle and his orchestra.

So, here we go with a song about a young lady who is not particularly well regarded because of her less-than-traditional ways. It's called "The Lady Is A Tramp."
