

Thank you very much.

You know, one of the most important elements that contributed to the development of the West in America was the railroad. The transcontinental railroad, completed in 1869, was hailed as the grandest enterprise under God and literally changed the face of America.

Many people worked on the development of railroads in America, and we'll honor them now with this great song of tribute. Here's our version of a great folk song written about their labors - "I've Been Working On The Railroad."
